Front Royal, Virginia – Race Day™ Films announced today an agreement to create, produce, and distribute a video of The Nation's Triathlon®. The race will occur on 29 September 2007 in Washington D.C. The video will contain both a documentary about the race and a full length preview of The Nation's Triathlon race course.

“We are pleased to film The Nation's Triathlon,” said Race Day Films co-founder John Stann. “We recently filmed the Annapolis Triathlon with great success, and we anticipate our effort at The Nation's Triathlon will be even better.” Fellow founder Matt Barrett added, “We believe our film of The Nation's Triathlon will benefit many parties including the event management team and the City of Washington D.C.” “The City will be both an incredible backdrop and a feature in our video,” said Director Kevin Hershberger. “We are excited to begin filming.”

Founder and organizer of The Nation's Triathlon, Charles Brodsky, had similar sentiment. “We've worked hard to make the second annual Nation's Triathlon bigger and better than the first. We have succeeded, and Race Day Films will contribute to and compliment that success nicely through the video. I am very happy that race participants will be able to see race footage of themselves at the Race Day Films sales booth at our Finish Line Festival. I think the participants will really appreciate it too.”

“The video is available for purchase right now through our Web site at a special pre-release price. It will be released and shipped sometime between mid November and early December,” said John Stann. “Folks getting ready for next year's Nation's Triathlon should have a very good tool to help them prepare.”
